TWO ANTLER SPOONS FROM ONTARIO

BY ALANSON SKINNER

THE two carved antler spoons shown in the accompanying plate were obtained from graves in Atti-wandaron or Neutral cemeteries, a having been discovered at Saint Davids, Ontario, and b in a burial ground on the shore of Lake Medad, in Wentworth county, near Hamilton, Ontario. Bone and antler spoons, while known in New York and Ontario as products of the western Iroquoian tribes, are by no means common, since the natives preferred spoons of wood and bark, or even used the unworked shells of freshwater clams.

A few bone and antler spoons from New York and Canada have been illustrated, but all are squat and broad-bowled, like the wooden forms still in use among the Iroquois. The specimens here shown, on the contrary, are long and slender, and the handle of a, from its wavy outline, may have been intended to represent a snake. Fig. b is also neatly carved, and in beauty surpasses any similar objects in the collections of the museums of either Canada or New York.
